MONDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1893.

A THIRL of joy was felt in every breast, when it was announced on Sunday morning that the steamship MIOWERA had been successfully floated off from the coral reef on which she had lain embedded for six weeks, in full view from every part of the city. It is to be hoped that nothing will happen to prevent her being repaired, and restored to the service in which she is a pioneer. Captain Metcalfe and his experienced wreckers deserve great praise, as do also those who have aided and assisted in this laborious and difficult task, which has happily ended in the rescue from total loss of one of the finest vessels that ever entered this port.

WHY SHOULD NOT THE JAPANESE VOTE IN A PLEBISCITE?

The Bulletin attacks the Rev. E. P. Baker of Hilo as having been guilty of serious misstatement in representing to the meeting of the American Board that the Japanese in Hawaii would participate in any vote taken upon the question of monarchy or annexation. We do not know what the good pastor of the foreign church at Hilo actually did say. The words put into his mouth by the hasty report of a newspaper are quite liable to be incorrect. Even we newspaper men occasionally get things mixed. Mr. Baker may, for instance, merely have intimated that if a general vote of the people of Hawaii ought to be taken to decide the questions at issue, then the Japanese and Chinese portions of the community had as good a claim to vote as any others. We think it most probable that what Mr. Baker said was something in that line. And we also think that it would be very difficult to gainsay such an observation.

Are not men from Japan and China as really men as those from America or Europe? If we are to have our voting in Hawaii done upon the abstract ultra-democratic principle of one vote for every man, why then every man who is actually residing here must have his vote. It is irrational to exclude a man's vote because he comes from Asia and not from Europe, unless you admit that some other considerations must overrule the mere crude democratic idea that every man as such has the right to vote.

The Bulletin will say, and we shall agree with it: The Asiatic man is by education and habit alien to the prevailing ideas and principles of Christian governments, and therefore can rarely acquire the necessary fitness for voting with intelligent sympathy with the institutions of Christian civilization and constitutional government.

When it comes to the question of Asiatics voting, the condition of fitness to vote comes to the front in the Bulletin's thought, and we are with him entirely. But when the native Hawaiians claim to vote when such a great and fundamental question as annexation or monarchy is present, then the Bulletin casts to the winds all thought of fitness and intelligent qualification, and clamors: "The Hawaiian! Hawaii belongs to him! He has the supreme right to vote what shall become of his own country!" We think we do not misstate the Bulletin's position.

Now we admit the claim of the Hawaiian to special consideration in his own ancestral home. He should not be slighted. He should be thoroughly protected, provided for and made comfortable. He has thoroughly earned the most favorable treatment by his own past kindness to the foreigner who is occupying the lovely land from which the aborigine is wasting away. The native Hawaiian should be, so to speak, a most highly favored passenger on board the ship of state. But it does not follow that he is therefore to have a leading voice in the management of the ship, unless qualified to do so, any more than his Asiatic brother.

In a time of emergency like the present, facing vital issues, it appears to us to be pure childishness to talk of entrusting the decision of Hawaii's destiny to the weak, the ignorant and the superstitious. It must be decided by such men as we look to to decide all great and important affairs. The ship must be sailed among these reefs and in this tempest, by the competent officers, and not by the ignorant and frightened passengers. This may not be democratic, but it is common sense.

OPIUM QUESTIONS.

There seems to rest upon the mind of our esteemed contemporary, the Star, a little confusion about opium questions as they figured in the recent contests with royalty. An unnecessary advantage has thus been given to the Bulletin in its ridiculous efforts to show that the outcry against the palace outrages upon public morality was all a pretense.

There were three distinct forms of opium issues, in which the party of reform have been active. They should not be confounded. One occurred in 1886, when the king owned the legislature, and made them pass a bill to license the sale of opium, with a fixed sum of $30,000 for the license, which enabled him to exact bonuses from the licensees. One man, Ake, of Ewa, paid the king $75,000 bribe, and lost both license and money, and died of grief, not by suicide. This piece of royal villainy was a leading cause of the revolution of 1887.

The second form of opium abuse was in the extensive smuggling of the drug, with which an eminent and genial royalist leader was commonly reputed to be intimately connected. This smuggling reached great dimensions during 1892, and was a conspicuous grievance to the party of reform. Its supporters constituted the "opium ring," which the Star apparently confounds with the supporters of the bill to license the sale of opium.

This is the third form of the opium question. In the same way that many total abstinents believe prohibition impracticable, and accordingly support high license, so there were in the last legislature a number of reputable gentlemen anxious to restrict the consumption of opium, who no doubt sincerely believed that result could be best attained under the existing state of affairs by an opium license law. Partly with their aid, such a law was passed. Many believe they were very much in the wrong. The ADVERTISER opposed the opium bill with all its force. Two of the ministers, Messrs. Jones and Wilcox, opposed it, as well as many of the legislators, while some strong friends of reform voted for it for reasons stated above. The supporters of this bill should not be confounded with the "opium bill," although the bill was a favorite measure of the ex-queen's party, and was promptly repealed along with the lottery law by the Provisional government.

Take a piece of wire, a coil will do and stretch it in building a fence; it's not hard to calculate the tension you put upon it, but whether you get the exact number of pounds or not, you know it is enough to put the wire tight enough for all practical purposes. If it breaks while you are stretching it, you conclude at once that it is of inferior quality. Take a coil of our wire and stretch it and stretch it, put your mules or your oxen on it and see if it will break. Coil it around your posts and see if there is a single rough place on it after you have bent into every conceivable shape. In the Honolulu Iron Works, our wire was put to a test for tensile strength and it registered 2,420 pounds. Take this good wire and build a locked fence with it and you have something that will last forever.

The rainy weather creates a demand for steel wire and cocoa mats. Our stock is large enough to select from and we have many different varieties. Our plain cocoa mats are cheap enough for any purpose, the bordered ones are good enough for a parlor, the "Aloha" style suitable for use in a palace. For muddy weather nothing will remove the dirt from the shoes as well as a Hartman Steel Mat. We have them in all sizes.

For the holidays, perhaps you will want to make a suitable present to your wife—an onyx table with a handsome banquet lamp is the most suitable thing to offer.

NOTE FROM WELL KNOWN SOCIETY LADY.

Honolulu, September 3d, 1893.

Dear Sirs:—I acknowledge with thanks the receipt of a bottle of Camelline. The advantages in this climate of the use of a soothing, harmless, preparation for the skin is known to most ladies; but fortunately many of the articles sold for that purpose produce unpleasant results. Camelline is certainly a most elegant and agreeable addition to the toilet, and my own observation and the high scientific testimony as to its merit satisfy me that its popularity is well deserved.
